Emma Anne Bellamy was a beautiful baby girl who was born with a rare and fatal heart condition. Her parents, Emily and David, were determined to make the most of their precious time with her. They decided to start a blog called Baking Baby Emma Anne, where they would share their journey of love, loss, and the power of baking.

Emily and David are both avid bakers. They love to spend time in the kitchen together, creating delicious treats for their family and friends. When they found out that Emma Anne was sick, they knew that baking would be a way to connect with her and bring joy to her life.

Baking with Emma Anne was a special time for the family. They would gather in the kitchen and laugh and talk while they mixed ingredients and decorated cakes. Emma Anne loved to watch her parents bake, and she would often reach out to touch the dough or frosting.

Baking also helped Emily and David to cope with the stress of having a child with a terminal illness. It gave them a sense of control and normalcy in a situation that was otherwise chaotic and unpredictable.

In May 2016, Emma Anne passed away at the age of 10 months. Her parents were heartbroken, but they were also grateful for the time they had with her. They continue to bake in her memory, and they share their recipes and stories on their blog.
