As a rideshare driver, one's car becomes a microcosm of the city itself, where passengers from all walks of life share their stories and experiences.

"I've had everyone in my car, from celebrities to tourists, from homeless people to business executives," said another driver. "Every ride is a chance to connect with someone new and learn about their world."

Drivers become confidants, therapists, and sometimes even friends to their passengers. They listen to stories of triumph, heartbreak, and dreams yet to be realized.
